Other Times, Other Places, the trilogy, is the anatomy of a forbidden love affair between a woman and a priest, a contemporary love story intended for a mature readership.

In Book I, Tell Her I Said Hello – Rémi Vallières is a red-blooded seminarian navigating a straightforward path to the priesthood. Abandoned at an orphanage at age four, he strives to uncover his roots and close the broken circle of his life. Kerri Ann England is a beguiling New York editor looking for love in the wrong places. The two live countries apart, are travelling parallel lines, each headed for different destinations. Against all odds they come together and fall into that tender trap called love. Life and the Church get in the way, but the heart is a persistent hunter. Such is the journey of two souls inextricably bound in a free fall into love. Forces of nature meet the dictates of fate. In the offing - the heated rhythms of heartbeats, love versus duty, a bedroom with a pew. The two are willing passengers on a ship navigating the shoals of the sacred and the forbidden.
