We face an emergency: it is up to us to choose to treat each other better and define sensible ways to produce and consume. Things are made by people. Today it becomes clear that people matter more than things. This book presents twelve fundamental values that have weathered millennia of civilization. These wise concepts are our eternal companions; they make us feel safe to sail through the stormy weathers of our mood fluxes, while offering us the space we need to integrate our creative identity with what we do for a living. We start collaborating when we focus on what we have in common. Togetherness brings us joy, a sense of purpose and belonging to the human collectivity. The success of our work organizations depends on the health of our teams; the welfare of our society relies on the accomplishment of each individual. This essay is a journey toward personal integration. Ultimately it is about love, the miracle glue that makes one whole and unites people, and about creativity, the missing link between our spirit and our human expression. We are ready to bring out the angel within and offer to the world our most beautiful gifts.
