Cobras, Kids And Pyramids: Adventures of a Teaching Couple in Pakistan, Bangladesh and Egypt

Jane E Cundiff

Jane and Ken Cundiff share their personal memoir of true-life stories as an American couple teaching at international high schools around the world. With a hint of an Indiana Jones' lifestyle, Jane and Ken teach advanced sciences in the day and quest after exotic explorations and cultural understanding in their spare time. From their archive of journals and thousands of photographs the actively written stories are genuine and the venue expansive. Pakistan, Bangladesh and Egypt were the first three of seven countries in which they lived over a span of twenty-one years. Rich details describe their foreign life, from experiences at home and the classroom to exciting excursions into the Himalayan Mountains and the Sahara Desert. These personal involvements give us an intimate link with real people and places of different religions and cultures in the pursuit of a broader global understanding.
